

do more internally and internationally to coordinate their efforts.

HOW TO BEST WORK TOGETHER

To begin, the private sector offers many good examples of cooperation. The industry deserves credit for taking the lead in many areas—developing technical and risk management standards, convening information-sharing forums, and spending considerable resources. International bodies, including the Group of 7 Cyber Experts group and the Basel Committee, are creating awareness and identifying sound practices for financial sector supervisors. This is important work.

But there is more to be done, especially if we take a global perspective. There are four areas where the international community can come together and boost the work being done at the national level:

First, we need to develop a greater understanding of the risks: the source and nature of threats and how they might impact financial stability. We need more data on threats and on the impact of successful attacks to better understand the risks.

Second, we need to improve collaboration on threat intelligence, incident reporting and best practices in resilience and response. Information sharing between the private and public sector needs to be improved—for example, by reducing barriers to banks reporting issues to financial supervisors and law enforcement.

Different public agencies within a country need to communicate seamlessly. And most challenging, information sharing between countries must improve.

Third, and related, regulatory approaches need to achieve greater consistency. Today, countries have different standards, regulations, and terminology. Reducing this inconsistency will facilitate more communication.

Finally, knowing that attacks will come, countries need to be ready for them. Crisis preparation and response protocols should be developed at both the national and cross-border level, so as to be able to respond and recover operations as soon as possible. Crisis exercises have become crucial in building resilience and the ability to respond, by revealing gaps and weaknesses in processes and decision making.

CONNECTING THE GLOBAL DOTS

Because a cyberattack can come from anywhere in the world, or many places at once, crisis response protocols must be articulated within regions and globally.

That means the relevant authorities need to know “whom to call” during a crisis, in nearby and, ideally, also in faraway countries. For small or developing countries, this is a challenge that needs international attention. Many rely on financial services or correspondent lines provided by global banks for financial connection. Developing cross-border response protocols will help countries understand their respective roles in a crisis and ensure a coordinated response in the event of a crisis.

The Group of 7 countries has made an excellent start at building collaboration on cybersecurity, but this effort needs to be broadened to each and every country.

Here the IMF can play an important role. With a much broader representation than most of the standard-setting institutions, the IMF has the ability to raise the concerns of emerging-market and developing countries to a global level. Because any place is a good place to start an attack, it is in the ultimate interest of advanced economies to work with other countries to share information, coordinate actions, and build capacity.

At the IMF, we work with countries that need to build this capacity, developing the skills and expertise needed to recognize and effectively counter cybersecurity threats.

Our international partners are doing the same, and we work regularly with an array of stakeholders in the public and private sector.

Successful cyberattacks have the potential to hamper financial development by creating distrust, especially if personal and financial data are compromised.

If we want to reap the benefits of new technologies that can develop markets and expand financial inclusion, we have to preserve trust, and ensure the security of information and communications technologies. With cybersecurity, there is always more to be done simply because the pace of change is breathtakingly fast.

Mr. MCHENRY. Madam Speaker, I urge adoption of this measure, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Ms. WATERS. Madam Speaker, I yield myself the balance of my time.

In closing, cybersecurity is a major issue facing all aspects of our economy, including the financial sector. It is an important issue for both private companies and government agencies.

H.R. 4458 will enhance congressional oversight of our banking regulators to ensure that they are maintaining strong cyber defenses of their own systems, as well as the banks and credit unions they regulate. I urge Members to support this important legislation.

I thank the ranking member for his leadership and for the way that he reached across the aisle in working with us.

Madam Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentlewoman from California (Ms. WATERS) that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 4458, as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds being in the affirmative) the rules were suspended and the bill, as amended, was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PRESIDENT GEORGE H.W. BUSH AND FIRST SPOUSE BARBARA BUSH COIN ACT

Ms. WATERS. Madam Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (S. 457) to require that $1 coins issued during 2019 honor President George H.W. Bush and to direct the Secretary of the Treasury to issue bullion coins during 2019 in honor of Barbara Bush.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The text of the bill is as follows:

S. 457

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mrs. WATSON COLEMAN). Pursuant to the rule, the gentlewoman from California (Ms. WATERS) and the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. MCHENRY) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentlewoman from California.

GENERAL LEAVE

Ms. WATERS. Madam Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks on this legislation and to insert extraneous material thereon.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from California?

There was no objection.

Ms. WATERS. Madam Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Madam Speaker, I rise in strong support of S. 457, the President George H.W. Bush and First Spouse Barbara Bush Coin Act. This bill directs the Treasury to issue $1 coins honoring the life and legacy of President George Herbert Walker Bush as well as a bullion coin commemorating his wife, former First Lady Barbara Bush.

The dollar coin was one of the first silver coins minted in the United States. Since the first dollar coins were struck in 1794, the dollar coin has, on occasion, been minted with the images of various individuals whose leadership, actions, and deeds have played an integral role at key moments in our Nation's history. These include President Dwight D. Eisenhower, suffragist Susan B. Anthony, and, most recently, Lemhi Shoshone guide and interpreter for the Lewis and Clark expedition, Sacagawea.

Beginning in 2007, the Mint sought to honor our Nation's Presidents by issuing $1 coins, featuring their images in the order that they served. The last President to be honored under this program was President Ronald Reagan in 2016.

This bill reauthorizes the Treasury to mint a $1 coin in honor of the late President George H.W. Bush and his wife, Barbara Bush, under the Presidential $1 Coin Program.

George Herbert Walker Bush served as the 41st President of the United States from 1989 to 1993. A career public servant, President Bush served our country as a U.S. Navy pilot during World War II before going on to serve in the U.S. House of Representatives, as a U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations, as Director of Central Intelligence, and as the 43rd Vice President of the United States. As President, Bush presided over the collapse of the Soviet Union, German reunification, and the first Gulf war.

In his post-Presidency, Bush is remembered for using his spotlight to support various charities and for working closely with former Presidents Carter and Clinton to encourage public service and encourage aid for victims of natural disasters both at home and abroad.

Barbara Pierce Bush also served as First Lady from 1989 to 1993. A fierce advocate for literacy, Mrs. Bush was dedicated to eliminating generational cycles of illiteracy through her involvement in the Barbara Bush Foundation for Family Literacy and other reading organizations. As First Lady, she was known as much for her humor and self-deprecating wit as she was for being a keen adviser and confidant to President George H.W. Bush.

In addition to their decades-long careers as public servants, President and Mrs. Bush were the patriarch and matriarch of a family of public servants, including the 43rd President of the United States, George W. Bush, and the former Governor of Florida, John Ellis Bush. Their dedication to patriotism, service, and each other are an inspiration to us all.

So I thank our Senate colleague Mr. CORNYN for introducing this bill, as well as Mr. WILLIAMS and all members of the Texas delegation, including our own Representative SYLVIA GARCIA, a valued new member of the Financial Services Committee, for their hard work on the bill, and I urge Members to vote “yes.”

Madam Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. MCHENRY. Madam Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

“There could be no definition of a successful life that does not include service to others”—the words of George Herbert Walker Bush.

“Each day we should do something to help others”—the words of Barbara Pierce Bush.

We know them as the President and the First Lady. The people of Houston know them and knew them as kind and wonderful and thoughtful neighbors. That is the reason why so much of Houston is named after 41 and his wife, Barbara. They are special people, indeed.

In a special time in American history, they served their country and they devoted their life to public service: first, here in the House of Representatives, where George H.W. Bush served for but a short period of time; then, at the highest levels of government, as Ambassador to the United Nations, as Director of the CIA, and as an Ambassador to China.

Sadly, we lost President George H.W. Bush in November of 2018, just a few months after his wife, Barbara, passed away on April 17, 2018.

We know of their devotion to the American people, and what we have before us is legislation that authorizes the U.S. Mint to make $1 coins honoring the service and extraordinary lives of former President and First Lady Bush.

President Bush's decades of service first began in World War II, where he made a rare feat of surviving after being shot down over the Pacific. So we know of his full life of service. We know of their family's full devotion to us as the American people, and we thank them for their service.

It is an honor to be on the floor of this House of Representatives to speak in honor of such an important life and work. This is but a small statement of our gratitude for what they did for us and how they served us.

Madam Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. WATERS. Madam Speaker, I yield such time as she may consume to the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. GARCIA), a valued new member of the Financial Services Committee.

Ms. GARCIA of Texas. Madam Speaker, I thank the chairwoman for the time allotted to me.

Today, I speak to celebrate the legacies of fellow Houstonians, former President George H.W. Bush and former First Lady Barbara Bush.

Before and after Mr. Bush's Presidency, he and Barbara made Houston, Texas, their home. They quickly became mainstays in our community, in part, because of their support of Houston sports teams—I know; I sat in the big box with them at many Astros games—and also for the Houston Rodeo. They both wore their hats really well and all things Houston. But mostly, it was because of their advocacy for serving the public good in all their philanthropic efforts.

Barbara Bush was an enthusiastic champion of improving literacy for families and children. The Barbara Bush Foundation for Family Literacy, for example, donated money to replace books and materials destroyed after Hurricane Harvey.

Former President Bush was equally committed to public service. His foundation, Points of Light, mobilized volunteers after Hurricane Katrina hit the Gulf Coast in 2005; and, as the chairwoman noted, President Bush, together with President Clinton and others, always together, formed the Presidents Club to help after any disaster. He was able to reach across the aisle and, again, do what he knew to do best, which was to serve the public good.

I am a proud cosponsor of this commemorative coin act to honor both of them and their charitable work in Houston and throughout. I cannot think of a better ambassador for Houston for all these years than the Bushes.

Many of us went from calling him President Bush to just simply George and Barbara because they were always together. I know every time we went to a game of the Astros and that kiss cam would go around the field, whenever it got there to either George or Barbara, George was ready, and the crowd just loved it, because the President was always there, ready to kiss Barbara on the spot as long as the kiss cam caught them.

They were truly Houston's greatest ambassadors. They are missed, but their legacy lives on.

I thank the sponsors of this bill, Senator CORNYN over in the Senate and Mr. WILLIAMS here in the House.

I thank the chairwoman for giving me the time to say a few words about some people who were really very, very, important to Houston.

Mr. MCHENRY. Madam Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from the great State of Arkansas (Mr. HILL), who is the ranking member of the National Security, International Development and Monetary Policy Subcommittee of the Financial Services Committee.

Mr. HILL of Arkansas. Madam Speaker, I thank my friend, the ranking member of the House Financial Services Committee, for yielding to me.

I, too, rise and thank JOHN CORNYN, the Senator from Texas, and my good friend, small business man, auto dealer from Dallas, Texas, ROGER WILLIAMS, for his leadership on this commemoration.

What a treat to be here on the House floor and honor George and Barbara Bush right where he served as a member of the House Ways and Means Committee some 50-plus years ago.

He loved the House. He loved an Arkansan named John Paul Hamerschmidt, a longtime member of the House Transportation Committee. They were best friends. They were freshmen together.

He always spoke fondly of this House, and it served him well when he was Vice President, served him well when he was President of the United States.

My wife, Martha, and I think about one thing when we think about George and Barbara Bush, whom we had the pleasure to know for over 40 years and work for for 4 years.

When you are at school with your kids or filling out a form, there is a line that says, “in case of emergency,” and there is a blank, and you are supposed to put a friend's name, a neighbor's name, a colleague's name. Madam Speaker, when we think of George and Barbara Bush, we think of that form.

In case of an emergency, call George Bush, call Barbara Bush. Because that is what they were. They were neighbors. In their soul, as the ranking member from North Carolina said, service was at the heart, whether it is pushing the cart across the Randalls' parking lot in Houston, serving cookies sitting on the floor of the vice president's mansion here in Washington, D.C., welcoming foreign leaders at the diplomatic entrance of the White House, service was at the heart. Being a neighbor was at the heart. That was George and Barbara Bush.

You think about our kids and their striving for who to look up to, who to have as a hero on the sports field, on the hospital board of directors, on the city council, in this House, serving the people of America. Who do you think of? George and Barbara Bush.

America, buy these $1 coins, hand them out to young people and say, if you are looking for a hero, you are looking for George Bush. Look no further than Barbara Bush. What the Bushes did pre-Presidency, in the Presidency, in the limelight for this country was lead and demonstrate service from the heart.

I can tell you a million stories about what a decent person George Bush was and what a wonderful woman, biting, bossy, fabulous mom, grandmother, and First Lady Barbara Bush was. Don't ever be caught chewing gum around her because you will swallow it. She was tough. She set high standards. Her children were held to those high standards. And she has lifted our whole country up to high standards by being an outstanding First Lady.

Tonight on this House floor it is an honor to be here and honor the memory of George and Barbara Bush by unanimously in this House supporting JOHN CORNYN and ROGER WILLIAMS' good bill to have the United States Treasury mint a coin to someone we look up to, we remember with reverence, we are grateful for, grateful for their service to this country.

From being fished out of the Pacific Ocean onto the fish back all the way to the White House, what a story.

As Chairwoman WATERS said, even better was the story after the Presidency. George Bush shaving his head in symbolism, support and solidarity with the kids at MD Anderson Cancer Center in Houston. George Bush wearing that goofy smile with his goofy socks to bring out heart and reverence for the good work of MD Anderson. Barbara Bush, for something that plagues every community in this country, every age in this country, the lack of literacy. How can you be a successful American and not be literate? And Barbara Bush from day one said, this is a fight I am in. And she fought for literacy for adults and for kids all over this country and had fun doing it. Her daughter-in-law, Laura Bush, our First Lady also, has carried that mantle forward.

Thank you, Madam Speaker, for this opportunity to be on the floor to pay tribute again to Mr. and Mrs. Bush for their leadership in this country. I thank the Members of this House that come together on both sides of the aisle and recognize a leader when they see one. I appreciate the ranking member from North Carolina for the time. I am going to vote "yes."

Mr. MCHENRY. Madam Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. WILLIAMS), my colleague and member of the House Financial Services Committee, the lead House sponsor of the legislation we are considering today.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Madam Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding. I rise today in strong support of the President George H.W. Bush and First Spouse Barbara Bush Coin Act honoring one of the most remarkable couples in our Nation's history.

I am proud to have introduced the House companion bill, H.R. 1173, this Congress with a bipartisan group of 27 lawmakers from the Texas delegation.

President George H.W. Bush and First Lady Barbara Bush were examples of selflessness and sacrifice. And like their country they were tough, they were strong and they were kind.

From President Bush's naval aviation career where he was the youngest pilot to receive his wings and was later shot down over the Pacific to his small business career, to his tenure as a Texas Congressman, ambassador to the United Nations, ambassador to China, director of the Central Intelligence Agency and later as vice president, no one was more prepared to be President than George H.W. Bush.

During George H.W. Bush's Presidency, he tore down the Berlin wall, and he kept us safe during Desert Storm. He brought to the White House with him unwavering strength, patriotism, and humility.

An example of the latter that comes to my mind, when shortly before the USS George H.W. Bush, or CVN-77 as it is called, was completed, several of us on the board of directors went to President Bush's Houston office and let him know how the ship was doing and it was almost ready. Upon learning of its status, he put his head in his hands and said, "This is one of the nicest things that has ever happened to me." He was the embodiment of a gracious warrior. Tonight I wear this tie that is the tie of CVN-77 to remind me of that event and in his honor.

He lived life fearlessly. Later in his life when President Bush turned 80, he celebrated his birthday, dubbed as "41 at 80" by jumping out of an airplane at 13,000 feet at College Station, and he did it twice. They were his fourth and fifth jumps, and I was honored to shake his hand upon the landing.

For those who knew the Bushes, their love for country was only surpassed by their love of each other. George and Barbara Bush were married for 73 years in one of the greatest love stories of our time. From their very first meeting to the decades of life and family they shared together, the Bushes personified devotion and the truest expression of love.

President Bush and I were often able to share our passion for America's favorite pastime while I served as a trustee for the Bush School of Government and Public Service at Texas A&M. Forty-one was a fixture in the world of baseball, and he famously took credit for the phrase "you da man" while praising the Houston Astros' Rusty Staub after a game in the sixties. It was one of the very few things he would ever boast about and be braggadocious. He claimed from then on that he never received enough credit for coining that phrase.

I also had the great privilege of awarding him the National College Baseball Hall of Fame induction trophy in his Houston office a few years ago for his esteemed and great career he had playing for Yale at first base and playing in the College World Series. Today I even wear this ring as a George H.W. Bush award recipient from the National College Baseball Hall of Fame.

President Bush taught my daughters how to play basketball in Kennebunkport preparing them for their future junior high and high school careers. He most notably taught them the "falling leaf" shot. I think this is about how it looked, which in his mind would make them all-stars if mastered, while they wore the tennis shoes given to them by Mrs. Bush as they practiced.

First Lady Barbara Bush was a force of nature, and she carried the mantle of trusted adviser and family matriarch with unfailing grace. Barbara displayed true dedication to her country and her family in every phase of her life.

To this day, one of my most meaningful memories was President Bush often saying thank you for being a friend to my family and a friend to my son.

Together President Bush and Mrs. Bush exemplified what all Americans should strive to emulate. They were friends of America, and I was honored to call them friends of mine.

I urge my colleagues to support this bill honoring the legacy of two of our Nation's most devoted servants.

In closing, I would just like to say this to President Bush, "Mr. President, you da man." In God we trust.

Mr. MCHENRY. Madam Speaker, may I inquire of the Chair the time remaining on our side.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from North Carolina has 7½ minutes remaining.

Mr. MCHENRY. Madam Speaker, I yield 2½ minutes to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. ARRINGTON), a former George W. Bush administration appointee.

Mr. ARRINGTON. Madam Speaker, I thank my colleague from North Carolina for yielding and for the opportunity to speak about a great American hero and a wonderful family, a class act.

I was privileged to serve under the great leadership of George W. Bush as Governor of the Lone Star State and then President of this great country. No doubt his parents, their character, their patriotism, and love for their fellow man did not fall too far from the tree, as we say in Texas.

I rise in support of the President George H.W. Bush and First Spouse Barbara Bush Coin Act sponsored by friend and fellow Texan, Senator JOHN CORNYN.

George Herbert Walker Bush and his wife First Lady Barbara Bush were exemplars of leadership and service to the country and an almost perfect picture of a devoted and loving marriage. If there is a perfect marriage, they certainly seemed to have it.

I think, Madam Speaker, it is right and good to honor and commemorate the most noble and accomplished leaders and public servants, and no doubt, at the top of that list is George Herbert Walker Bush and his wife Barbara Bush, and I am grateful for the opportunity to honor the legacy of President and First Lady Bush by supporting the issuance of these coins.

Mr. MCHENRY. Madam Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Madam Speaker, in writing about George H.W. Bush it was said duty was duty. In 1975, there is this move in the administration to shuttle off George H.W. Bush to a nondescript position. The assumption was if George H.W. Bush was offered a job in public service, he was going to say no because it wasn't the right job for him. Instead, President Bush said yes and served our Nation as director of the CIA at a moment in American history where that agency had massive need for reform and change and also to rebuild its capacity to protect us as Americans.

It was written about him, "Your message came as a total and complete shock," Bush wrote to his friend, Henry Kissinger. "Henry, you did not know my father. The President did," meaning President Nixon. "My dad inculcated into his sons a set of values that have served me well. In my own short public life"—not realizing that 20 years hence he would still be in public service—"one of these values quite simply is that one should serve his country and his President."

That is what George H.W. Bush wrote in 1975, his notion of public service. Whether you are a Republican or Democrat, those words of public service of the need for us as individual Americans to do our duty when called upon and to offer ourselves to serve the public and to serve our fellow man is something that was commendable in 1975 and is absolutely commendable and especially commendable this day.

On the floor this day, on both sides of the aisle, we honor an amazing legacy of what he became known as, as 41. The 41st President of the United States and his First Lady, not just during his time in the White House, but his first lady in his life, Barbara Pierce Bush. We know of their family legacy and the generations they have given this country in public service, but we also know the amazing legacy of that World War II generation that he represented and the legacy of public service and trying to get things done for the American people.

□ 1830

Mr. Speaker, it is an honor to speak in favor of this resolution, this bill today, and I ask my colleagues to support this recognition of the lives, the dedication, and the selflessness of 41 and First Lady Bush.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Ms. WATERS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself the balance of my time.

This bill honors a couple who devoted their lives to public service and were known for their deep faith and commitment to decency and civility.

Mr. Speaker, I am honored to have worked in a bipartisan manner on this bill, and I urge my colleagues to join me in supporting this important piece of legislation.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. CUELLAR). The question is on the motion offered by the gentlewoman from California (Ms. WATERS) that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, S. 457.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds being in the affirmative) the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.
